1. Links to Colleges and Departments & Programs are placed prominently at the top. When hovered, a menu drops to provide more specific links (see TL with hovered links.png). This interaction is similar to the top links on emory.edu.

2. WebMail, WebCT, and PortTriton are given prominence in the header area. Each link is represented by a simple icon. When clicked, a new tab opens and directs the browser to the external URL.

3. Breadcrumbs are moved up, outside of the main content area and closer to the header. This reduces clutter and separates content from navigation.

4. Moving Tools to the main body of the page gives room for these originally "See Also" links. Further research should be conducted to prioritize the order of links by popularity.

5. The most important change here categorizes and relocates the links originally under "Tools". Of the original list: "Addresses" and "Career Portfolio" are moved to the full list under "See all tools"; "WebMail" is moved to the top of the page; "More Tools..." is changed to "See all tools". These changes are intended to provide only the top priority links to students, help students locate links faster, and move closer to a customizable portal layout.

6. As TritonLink is catered toward a largely Gen Y population, it would be highly beneficial for both students and departments to add a live Twitter feed. This is a fast way to provide the latest information about sporting events, emergency updates, and other student-relevant news. The feed would either contain (1) only updates from a TritonLink account or (2) updates from a list of UCSD departments.

7. This change should take into account not only changes in layout, but also content (headline news from UCSD Guardian cater directly to undergraduates). Font has been made smaller to: give more emphasis to tools, allow inclusion of photos, allow more room for headlines.

8. "See all tools" link directs user to a full list of tools page.
